Respected Officer,

Reconsideration of Refusal

We submitted a complete application on [date], and received the refusal on [date].

Primary Reason for Visit

The application was refused based on the following reasons:

1. Officer is not satisfied that David will leave Canada at the end of his trip.

David's primary purpose for visiting Canada is to reunite with his son, Daniel. It's been [number of months/years] since David and Daniel last met. The bond between father and son is incredibly strong, and this visit is crucial for maintaining their relationship. David has every intention of returning to his home country due to significant work commitments and family responsibilities. He is a dedicated [occupation], which requires his presence and attention. His work schedule includes [brief description of job responsibilities], demonstrating his necessity to return.

Furthermore, David has strong family ties in his home country, including [mention family members or dependents] who rely on his support. His daily routine involves [brief description of daily routine], highlighting his deep-rooted connection to his home country. Daniel, on the other hand, is unable to travel due to his demanding work commitments/study in Canada. This visit is the only feasible way for them to reunite.

2. The assets and financial situation are insufficient to support the stated purpose of travel for David.

Daniel has committed to fully covering all expenses related to David's visit. Daniel has provided detailed financial documents demonstrating his ability to support David during the stay, including recent bank statements showing sufficient funds, employment verification confirming his stable income, and a letter of financial support outlining his commitment. These documents provide clear evidence of financial stability and the ability to cover all travel-related expenses without strain.

Additionally, David has meticulously planned his travel itinerary, ensuring a well-budgeted trip that aligns with his financial capacity. This planning includes [mention any specific arrangements like travel bookings, accommodation plans, etc.], further demonstrating that all expenses will be adequately covered. We have re-attached the latest financial documents for your reassessment, providing a comprehensive overview of the financial readiness for this trip.

You can re-attach the latest financial documents for reassessment.

3. The purpose of David's visit to Canada is not consistent with a temporary stay given the details he has provided in his application.

David's application for a visitor visa is entirely consistent with the purpose of his visit to reunite with his son. David is a dedicated [his occupation] with a strong professional reputation and no intentions of overstaying his authorized visit duration. His professional commitments and responsibilities in his home country are ongoing and require his return.

The primary and clear purpose of his visit is family reunification, fostering important familial bonds and experiences that are vital for his and Daniel's well-being. David's strong ties to his home country, including his professional and personal responsibilities, unequivocally indicate his intention to return after his visit. This visit is a temporary stay aimed solely at reuniting with his son and strengthening their familial relationship.

We respectfully request that the decision to refuse David's visitor visa application be reconsidered in light of the above clarifications.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
